LITTLE GIRL DROWNED; HER BROTHER A HERO

14-yr. Old William Eaton Saves Mother and Chum

BOAT AND FOUR UPSET

Sad Accident Sunday at Eagleville when Zelda Eaton Meets Death in Bald Eagle Creek—Her Mother Revived with Difficulty.

A sad drowning accident occurred early Sunday afternoon, last, at Eagleville, Zelda May, the 5 years old daughter of Squire and Mrs. George Eaton, of that place, going to her death in Bald Eagle creek. A boat containing Mrs. Eaton and three children, was upset in the highly flooded creek, but fortunately three of the number escaped drowning.

From out of the sadness surrounding the accident looms the remarkable heroism of William Eaton, the 14 years old brother of the little girl who was drowned. He was the only one of the four who could swim. Single-handed and alone he seized 7 years old Chester Waltz, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Waltz, who live on the Bolopue farm, and swam with him to the shore. Apparently with no thought of danger to himself he jumped back into the deep water to rescue his mother. Another boat happened to be along shore nearby, and securing this he went to the task of helping his mother, a woman weighing almost two hundred pounds. She was struggling in the water and fast losing consciousness. With almost superhuman strength the little boy dragged her into the boat and rowed to the shore.

By this time the body of his sister had disappeared from view. As he rowed his mother's body to shore William thought she was dead and cried loudly for help. E. J. Waltz and Lewis Bolopue were chatting at the Bolopue farm when they heard the boy's cries for help. They started on a run for the point from which the cries came and arrived about the time William Eaton had got his mother to a place of safety. When they arrived they at first thought she was dead. With all haste possible they rowed the boat, still containing her body, to the Bolopue farm and once there started to revive her. It was fifteen minutes or more before there was any evidence of life, but once assurred that she was not dead they redoubled their efforts. Dr. Tibbens and his son, also a physician, of Beech Creek, meanwhile had been summoned and they soon were on the scene. Restoratives were applied and finally Mrs. Eaton became conscious. She remained at the Bolopue farm until Monday morning, when she was able to return to her home.

Volunteers were soon along the bank of the creek searching for the body of Zelda Eaton. The creek bed was grappled but her body was not located for several hours. Finally it was discovered still floating in the stream, but about a foot or so below the surface, at a point near the lower part of the Bolopue farm, upward of a half mile from where the boat upset. Life was extinct and there remained only the sad duty of bearing the little body to the grief stricken home. Her features were calm in death. The accident had happened so suddenly and so unexpectedly that the little girl was plunged into the deep water almost before she knew what had happened. Unable to swim she could not help herself and in less time than it takes to tell it her body had been sucked below the surface of the swiftly moving current.

Typical of the underlying cause for a "Mother's Day" throughout the land, celebrated on the very day of the sad accident, was the sacrificing effort of Mrs. Eaton to give up her life that her little adopted daughter might be saved. When the boat upset and all four of the party were struggling in the water, her first thought was for the rescue of little Zelda. The mother, even though she realized that she probably would be drowned, called to her son, William, to save Zelda. But fate had destined it to be otherwise. The one for whose safety the mother thought first was the one to be carried to a watery grave.

It was about one o'clock in the afternoon when the happy party got into a flat-bottom boat at the foot of the hill this side of Eagleville and started to row down to the Bolopue farm. Recent rains had swolen the stream, and a swift current was running, but there was no particular thought of danger as the boat smoothly drifted on its way. Along the bank of the stream fallen limbs of trees project one, two, three and five feet into the water. Some are easily noticed, others lie several inches or more beneath the surface. Just when the party seemed happiest in the thought of an afternoon's outing came the tragedy that was to cost one life and come perilously close to another. The boat struck a partly submerged limb projecting from the shore, swerved about suddenly and then caught by the swift current, upset. The next instant Mrs. Eaton and the three children were in water beyond their depth. But for the heroism of the one child all would have been drowned.

ADDITIONAL INTERVIEWS

Candidates Questioned Regarding Views on Local Option.

Bellefonte, Penn'a. May 13th, 1914.
To the Temperance People of Centre County.

In a communication published recently in this paper I gave you the answers of the men who are seeking for nomination in the several parties, and for different offices. There were a few whom it was then stated we had not heard from. It was promised that a statement would be made later covering these. This report keeps that promise.

FOR CONGRESS.

Guy B. Mayo, Smithport, Pa. Washington. Dry.

Col. H. S. Taylor, Bellefonte, Pa. Democrat. No answer.

FOR STATE SENATE.

C. G. Johnston, Philipsburg, Pa. Socialist. Dry.

S. J. Miller, Madera, Pa. Republican. Very Doubtful. Probably Wet.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

H. B. Scott, Philipsburg, Pa. Republican. Very Doutful.

You will find the promises of all others running for Congress, State-Senate, and the Legislature tabulated in the former communication.

A communication from the State Anti-Saloon League shows that the men running for the higher offices have been interviewed. Nothing needs be added on the subject of United States Senator, and Governor, to what was reported before.

The Lieutenant Governor should be looked over. The reports are as follows.

Frank B. McClain, Lancaster. Republican. As speaker of the House he always appointed liquor committees in the interests of the liquor people.

William T. Creasy. Washington Party. Has always been right in his fights on the liquor queston.

Percy F. Smith, Washington Party, Pittsburgh, Pa. Has always been an enthusiastic Temperance man, and can be depended upon.

One or two things need emphasis. The liquor people are said to practically concede the next legislature, and the next governor to the temperance people. Their hope is in holding the State Senate. To this end they are reported to be spending money like water, and working the finest schemes possible to deceive the voters. There is some evidence that they are busy in this senatorial district. It behooves every voter to vote a certainty. Be sure that the man you vote for is a pledged, out and out, temperance man. Dont vote any complimentary votes. Every vote counts. And then look down the line of the ticket you vote to see how the others stand, and who they are. It isn't enough to have your candidate for Governor all right. See where your candidate for Lieutenant Governor stands, and note what he is. Don't be deceived by anything. Above all nominate temperance men in your party, let it be what it may. Then, in November the battle of ballots will be along economic lines. If either party nominates a doubtful, or a wet, candidate, then we will mass our votes, and elect the man we can trust. Put none but temperance men up.

G. E. HAWES.
President Bellefonte Temperance Society.

P. R. R. Band Concert.

It is to be earnestly hoped that Bellefonte lovers of music will turn out in numbers and accord a warm greeting to the Pennsylvania Railroad band from Tyrone at the afternoon and evening entertainments to be given in Garman's Opera House Saturday, next. The afternoon entertainment will be at 2.30. Prices, adults 20c; children 10c. Evening entertainment at 8.30. Down stairs, 25 and 35c; balcony, 15 and 25c. Street concert before each entertainment. A feature at both entertainments will be solos by Miss Dorthy Wilson, soprano, and by two boy cornetists. The band will appear in new uniforms for the occasion.

Big Trout Caught.

Several big trout were caught in Spring creek in the very heart of town on Wednesday afternoon. Joe Thal caught one jnst above the falls measuring 20 inches. Merrill Knapp got a 20-inch trout in the head waters back of the Lauderbach-Barber Co. warehouse. Fred Whitmer got one 18 inches long below the High Street bridge. Several other large catches are reported.

MAY COURT SMALLEST IN LAST FIFTY YEARS

Prothonotary Foreman Says World Is Becoming Better.

TWO MURDER CASES UP

Emma Shay to Face Trial for Death of Child—John Misarah to Have New Trial for Death of Annie Duke—But One Other Case First Week.

Centre County's May term of court this year has the smallest appearance docket for any similar term in a half century. Which leads to the query: "Is the world becoming better, or does it just so happen that fewer persons are tripped up in their violations of the law?" Prothonotary David R. Foreman is of the belief that the former is the case. Said he:

"It means that the people are becoming better. Fewer persons are being sued these days than ever before. There isn't the craze to rush into court that once was the case. I really believe this is the explanation of the fact that fewer criminal and civil actions are up for the May term than for fifty years back. I observed this while going over the appearance docket. The present May term is smaller than that of one year ago by 100 cases."

"Uncle Dave", as he is known about the Court House, is an authority on court matters. He happened to be glancing over the appearance docket a day or two when he observed that each year was attended with a steady decline in the number of cases listed. His curiosity aroused he carried his investigation back fifty years with the result that the records showed the May term for the present year to be the smallest in all that period.

Two murder cases, technically so listed, at least, and a case of minor significance, represent the entire list for the first week of the May term. The second list is fairly large. One of the two murder cases is that of the commonwealth vs. John Misarah. It will be recalled that he shot and killed little Annie Duke at a wedding celebration at Cato some time ago. Misarah's counsel appealed for a new trial, following his conviction, and it was granted on the ground that the attorney for the prosecution had used language prejudicial to the defendant at the first trial.

The second case is that of the commonwealth vs. Emma Shay, of Howard, whose arrest some weeks ago was attended with surroundings of a sensational character. The first case will attract quite a few visitors from Snow Shoe and that section of the county. The Shay case will likely attract many visitors from the lower part of Baid Eagle valley.

WARDEN KILLS DOGS

Supposed to Have Killed Deer in Mountains Near Lamar.

The Lock Haven Democrat on Tuesday published the following: Last Sunday afternoon two dogs chased a deer from the mountains into the creek near Lamar. Their tounging was heard by Harry Holmes who lives in the vicinity, and being suspicious of the cause of the dogs' action, went down to the stream just as the deer plunged into it, which was at flood height, the dogs quickly following in its wake. The deer reached the shore and bounded up the hillside, while Mr. Holmes intercepted the dogs and succeeded in capturing one of them and diverting the attention of the other one so that it did not continue the chase. The dog Mr. Holmes caught bore a tag on which was the name of Charles Zimmerman of Mingoville, Centre county, otherwise "Hecla park," and he was supposed to be the owner.

Game Warden Ale of Tyrone, was notified and he called on Mr. Zimmerman where he found the other dog, both of which were killed by the warden. It is presumed that these are the dogs which have been active in the past chasing in and worrying deer, several of which were killed or died.

To Entertain Veterans.

In keeping with its custom of past years, Bellefonte Lodge of Elks will hold an informal reception and have open house for Centre County veterans at the club house on the afternoon of Memorial Day, from four until six o'clock. Light refreshments will be served.

Scale Had 13,000 Majority.

A majority of 13,000 was recorded in favor of the old 1912 scale in District No. 2, as given out by the United Mine Workers of America.

MOTHERS PENSIONS

State College Woman's Club Urges Action in Centre County.

Believing in the divine right of every child to the influence of a home and the loving care of its own mother; believing that the opportunity is now at hand to secure for the dependent children of Centre County this same right, the State College Woman's Club, at a recent meeting, passed the following:

Resolved: that the State College Woman's Club goes on record as heartily endorsing the Mother's Pension Bill passed by the last Legislature and as being earnestly desirous of having it immediately put into force in Centre County.

By act of the recent Legislature the sum of two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000) was appropriated for a Mother's Pension Fund, this fund to be distributed among the counties according to their respective population. The law further provides that each county shall receive its allotment as soon as its sets aside for this purpose an equal amount.

Many counties have already met the state's requirement and the Mother's Pension Law is now in operation.

Governor Tener signed this bill in April, 1913. Centre County's quota is $1133.03. This sum has stood to our credit in the state treasury for a year; but has not been available because our County Commissioners have not seen fit to set aside an equal amount.

The pensioning of dependent mothers, thus enabling them to care for their children in the home, is one more step forward in the great march of progress, in which our state leads.

Our nation pensions her soldiers. Are the soldiers who defend their country any more entitled to a pension than the mother who furnishes these soldiers?

The present system of caring for orphans is barbarous, tolerated only because through long usage we have become inured to its inhumanity. It deprives helpless children of their birthright, that of home influence and a mother's care.

Under the present regime homes are destroyed, little children are taken from their mothers and entrusted to an institution, mothers are separated from their children, and all this for no other crime than that of poverty. Is it just? Is it human? Mother love has long been the theme of poets, while we of wordly thoughts have looked on with small concern upon the destruction of the most enduring of earthly passions—a mother's love.

Viewed from an economic point it is much cheaper to help a mother support her children in the home than to support them in an institution, and the returns are vastly greater.

Some sidestep the issue by declaring that our quota is inadequate, "not a drop in the bucket", to quote exactly. Granted; but how are we to prove to the state this inadequateness if we do not first avail ourselves of that which is at hand!

The increase in taxation is so small that no self-respecting tax-payer would consider it. Less than a quarter of a mill increase secures for us the present appropriation.

The opportunity is now at hand to establish a better system for caring for our dependent children.

Mr. Taxpayer, will you fall into line? Will you protect and defend the sacred rights of the dependent and fatherless children in your county? Will you signify to the Commissioners your desire to have established in Centre County an act to succor and defend those whom our Master termed "the least of these"?

The question is now squarely before you. What will you do with it?

ACADEMY MINSTRELS

At Garman's Opera House Thursday & Friday, May 28 & 29.

Announcement was made on Tuesday that the Academy minstrels will be held this year at Garman's Opera House on the evenings of Thursday and Friday, May 28th and 29th. Great as have been the successes in past years, the minstrels this year promise to be the best ever. Friends of the school and others are urged to plan social and other engagements so as not to conflict with the two evenings selected by the Academy boys.

There will be sixty in the cast and the latest songs and newest jokes will fill the bill from top to bottom. The Academy boys have been hard at work with rehearsals since December and some delightful surprises are in store for those who attend this year's entertainments. The minstrels will be held under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Russel Blair.

The primaries on Tuesday, next, is the proper place for all Republicans to settle all party grievances.

PENROSE HERE TODAY CONFIDENT OF SUCCESS

Senator Says He Will Win Nomination on Tuesday.

MASS MEETING TONIGHT

Republican Rally in Court House—Reception this afternoon at State College—Visit Snow Shoe and Philipsburg Tomorrow.

United States Senator Boies Penrose arrived in Bellefonte today for a two-days campaign tour of Centre County. His schedule calls for a reception late this afternoon at State College, returning to Bellefonte in time for supper, an informal reception at the Brockerhoff House from 7 until 8 o'clock this evening and an address at a public meeting at the latter hour in the Court House.

Senator Penrose arrived here by automobile. He left Philadelphia Wednesday afternoon, spent last night at Harrisburg, and left there at 3 o'clock this morning for the ninety mile run to Bellefonte. He reported finding the roads between Philadelphia and Harrisburg in fairly good condition, but on the run here from Harrisburg road conditions were not so favorable. The heavy rains of the last few days washed the roads at many places and travel by automobile was necessarily slow.

Tomorrow morning Senator Penrose will go by automobile to Snow Shoe, arriving there about 10 o'clock. He will hold an informal reception at that place and in the afternoon proceed to Philipsburg, where he will address a mass meeting tomorrow night. Senator Penrose is accompanied by Hugh B. Nesbit, a prominent Washington newspaper man. Mr. Nesbit has made numerous campaign trips over the State. He stated that the remarkable change in public sentiment in the last three months has been a revelation to him. Some of the counties now most enthusiastic over Senator Penrose, he said, were classed three months ago as being hostile to his candidacy.

If the fatigue of campaigning during the last six weeks has had any effect on Senator Penrose his appearance would not indicate the fact. He apparently is enjoying splendid health. Making several speeches daily has not weakened his voice, and he seems in physical shape to continue the campaign indefinitely.

To "The Republican" Senator Penrose talked freely regarding his campaign for renomination at the primaries next Tuesday. Underlying his comment is a firm conviction that his nomination is assured by an overwhelming majority over J. Benajamin Dimmick, of Scranton, his only opponent for place on the Republican ticket. Moreover, it is the confident belief of Senator Penrose that Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh will poll a tremendous vote at the primaries and an even greater vote at the polls in November. Summing up his interview Senator Penrose volunteered the prediction that Pennsylvania will swing back into the Republican moorings in November and elect the entire Republican ticket.

"Everywhere I have been in the last two months I have found a pronounced turn in the tide as compared with two years ago", remarked Senator Penrose when asked for a comment on how he found conditions in the various parts of the State he has visited. "If any person doubts that the tide is running strongly with the Republican party let him observe results at the primaries next Tuesday. The Republican party is returning to its own, and the tide cannot be checked, let alone stopped.

"The effect of the Underwood bill on the industrial interests of Pennsylvania is now being felt on all sides, and it will be felt still more in the next year. The farmer also is feeling the results. It could not be otherwise with free importations from Canada, Argentine and other foreign countries. The farmer knows that under Republican administration he was prosperous, and the younger generation of farmers in particular are learning that conditions are not so favorable under Democratic rule.

"However, there is a brighter day coming, although the lamentable feature is that prosperity cannot be fully restored until 1916 when there will be a change at Washington. That there will be a change once the people have the opportunity to bring it about is certain.

"Pennsylvania will this year take a stand that will point the way to Republican triumph all along the line when the next President is to be chosen. At the polls in November in Pennsylvania more than 100,000 sensible Democrats will register their disproval of business conditions by voting for a return to Republican prosperity. We already witness the Democratic party in this State torn asunder, and the division and dissatisfaction will continue and become the more pronounced as the days go by. The ordering of Secretary of State Bryan into campaign duty in this State is an open insult to the intelligence of self respecting Democrats and instead of helping the Democratic party has merely contributed to the damage already done. The people of Pennsylvania are too intelligent to be told how to vote by emissaries from Nebraska, sent here by the Wilson administration to aid one faction as against another. The average American citizen believes in the spirit of fair play, and the insult heaped upon intelligent Democrat by President Wilson will be sharply resented at the polls.

"As to my own campaign I am more than pleased with the cordial receptions I have received everywhere throughout the State. Personally I am entirely willing to place my chances with the people, the farmer and wage earner, knowing that I will get a square deal and that the people will vote for what they believe to be their best interests. I have every reason to believe that I will be easily nominated at Tuesday's primaries and that my reelection in November is assured."

Enrollment in the State.

According to data collected by the Republican State Committee the recent party enrollment in Pennsylvania shows the following:

Republican enrollment, 681,485; Taft vote, 273,360

Democratic enrollment, 374,617; Wilson vote, 395,637.

Washington enrollment, 114,611; Roosevelt vote, 444,894

MUST BELIEVE IT

When Well Known Bellefonte People Tell It So Plainly.

When public endorsement is made by a representative citizen of Bellefonte the proof is positive. You must believe it. Read this testimony. Every sufferer of kidney backache, every man, woman or child with kidney trouble will do well to read the following:

Fred Scott, 247 E. Lamb St., Bellefonte, says: "I have to drive quite a bit over rough roads and the jolting had a bad effect on my kidneys. The trouble started with pains across the small of my back and if I stooped, I could hardly straighten, without getting sharp pains across my loins. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me by friends and I got a box at Green's Pharmacy Co. I found relief after taking the first few doses. One box made a cure and I have not had the slightest backache since. I am glad to give this statement, hoping others will use Doan's Kidney Pills that are suffering from Kidney trouble."

Teachers Summer Session.

Advance registration indicates an attendance of fully a 1000 teachers at the Summer Session of The Pennsylvania State College, beginning the last of June. Last year 600 teachers attended during the six weeks. There are 52 college instructors offering courses in nearly every line of study from Greek and Literature to Cooking, Poultry Raising and Wood Working. A special course in Milling is offered to those engaged in that industry, as well as courses in Biblical study for Sunday School workers. Many prominent educators will speak at the daily assemblies. Homer Rhodeheaver, who has charge of the music in "Billy" Sunday's campaigns, will lead at the Sunday evening campus services.

CHANGED HIS SHAPE.

Effect of Open Air Life Upon the Man of Business of Today.

"The American man, the American business man of forty or forty-five, has got a new shape," said a tailor. "He's got a lean, straight shape—full chest, narrow hips. But if you could have seen him a generation ago!

"The business man of forty expected to be fat and soft a generation ago. He rather admired, in fact, a fat, soft shape. The richest business men were fat and soft, and that made a fashion of it, just as Queen Alexandra's lameness made a limp fashionable in Victorian times.

"What stomachs our fathers had at forty or forty-five—feather bed stomachs, which they balanced by bending backward! A big stomach was a sign of success, a sign of gentility. If you were lean—why, you must be a laborer. Perhaps you didn't get enough to eat.

"What is the cause of the slender, agile figures of today? Open air and exercise, that's the cause. Golf is the cause. Motoring is the cause.

"My friend," the tailor impressively ended, "my books show that the middle aged business man of today is four inches bigger around the chest than the middle aged business man of 1890 and eighteen inches smaller around the stomach."—New York Tribune.

ANCIENT HIGH FINANCE.

When White Deerskins Passed as Currency In China.

In China, the first country to use banknotes, certain skins were once of such great value that they were accepted as cash, passing from hand to hand in the same way as banknotes of the present day. The negotiability of these skins was established in this way:

The Emperor Ou Ti, being in want of money, gave his treasurer to understand that such a state of affairs must not continue. At that time it was customary for princes and courtiers on entering the royal presence to cover their faces with pieces of skin. Taking advantage of this custom, the treasurer procured the issuance of a decree forbidding the use of any other skins for this purpose save those of a certain species of white deer in the royal parks. Immediately, of course, there arose a demand for pieces of these skins, which, being a monopoly, were sold at a high price.

Thus were the royal coffers refilled. The steady value of the skins thus obtained made them readily a substitute for coin of the realm.

In the Russian seal fisheries of Alaska the workmen were formerly paid in the currency stamped on squares of walrus hide.—Washington Star.

Wyoming Has Many High Mountains.

Wyoming has nine mountains exceeding 13,000 feet in height and of these three approach the 14,000 foot mark, according to the United States geological survey. They are Gannett peak, 13,785 feet; Grand Teton, 13,747 feet, and Fremont peak, 13,730 feet. Cloud peak, one of the most beautiful mountains in the state, is 13,730 feet above sea level. Besides these mountains Wyoming has thirty-one other named peaks upward of 12,000 feet in height and some forty unnamed mountains which exceed that altitude.

An interesting story might be written of the thousands of lofty unnamed mountain peaks of the west which are nearly double the height of the very highest mountains in the entire Appalachian mountain system in the eastern portion of the country. Colorado alone has dozens of mountains without name which are more than double the height of our most lofty eastern mountain.

Stones and Glass Houses.

The origin of the saying "Those who live in glass houses should not throw stones" is as follows: At the time of the union of England and Scotland London was inundated with Scotchmen, and the London roughs used to go about at night breaking their windows. Buckingham being considered the chief instigator of the mischief, a party of Scotchmen smashed the windows of the duke's mansion, known as the Glass House. The court favorite appealed to the king, who replied, "Steenie, Steenie, those who live in glass houses should be careful how they fling stones."

Feeding on Sunlight.

Major Miramond de la Roquette of the French army medical corps in reporting to the Academie des Sciences the results of some observations in southern Algeria on the relation between diet and sunlight gave it as his opinion that the tissues of the human body directly utilize the radiant energy of the sunshine. The normal diet of the natives of hot and sunny climes is far lower both in quantity and in nutritive quality than that of inhabitants of less favored regions, the sunlight seeming to make up the difference.

FLUORINE A RABID GAS.

Nothing Can Resist the Power of This Chemical Fury.

The fury of the chemical world is the element fluorine, although, strangely enough, it exists peacefully in company with calcium in fluorspar and also in a few other compounds.

Although this element was known and named a good while ago, it long resisted the efforts of chemists to isolate it, for the instant the compound containing it was torn apart the free fluorine attacked and combined with whatever substance composed the vessel containing it. It was finally isolated by the great French chemist Moissan.

Fluorine is a rabid gas that nothing can resist. It combines with all metals, explosively with some, or if they are already combined with some other nonmetallic element it mercilessly tears them away from it and takes them to itself.

In uniting with sodium, potassium, calcium, magnesium and aluminium the metals become heated, even to redness, by the fervor of its embrace. Iron filings slightly warm burst into brilliant scintillations when exposed to it. Manganese does the same. Even the noble metals, which at melting heat proudly resist the fascinations of oxygen, succumb to this chemical siren at moderate temperatures.

Glass is devoured at once and water ceases to be water by contact with this gas, which, combined with its hydrogen, at the same moment forms the acrid, glass dissolving hydrofluoric acid and liberates ozone.

Even hydrofluoric acid eats into and destroys every known substance except platinum and lead.—Exchange.

BURNING WATER.

Coal Wet Gives a Much Larger Amount of Heat Than When Dry.

Dry coal does not produce as much heat as coal that is considerably damp. It is, of course, a fact that a greater heat makes the fuel more valuable, and it is essential to know how to secure the most from ordinary fuel.

Coal that is to be burned in a furnace, a stove or a grate for immediate heat will produce nearly one-fourth more heat when wet than when dry. Coal that is to be placed in a stove or furnace to be closed up so as to produce a long continued, moderate heat will produce a little more than one-third more heat if there is plenty of moisture than can be secured if the coal is real dry.

Large lumps of coal can be soaked in a pail of water for a half hour, and the heat will be increased nearly one-half. This is done in cases where the lumps are used in stoves tightly closed, such as those known as air tight furnaces.

Several pails of water thrown over a ton of coal will increase its value greatly to the consumer. Coal will burn briskly in wet and almost airless mines, and it is said the heat is intense. When there is a fire and the coal pile burns it is difficult to drown that portion of the fire with water. We might as well secure a little of the heat stored in burning water as to permit it all to go unused.—Philadelphia North American.

The Contrary.

THE SURGEON'S GLOVES.

He Wears Them While Operating Since He Can't Get Clean Hands.

While the surgeon's success depends to a large extent upon his hands, they are at the same time a source of the greatest danger to himself and his patient.

No process has yet been discovered which makes it certain that a surgeon's hands are free from microbes and incapable of carrying infection to a patient. This is why the good surgeon will not perform the most trivial operation without first covering his hands with properly sterilized gloves.

Prolonged scrubbing with soap and running water, followed by another thorough scrubbing in from 70 to 80 per cent alcohol, removes the outer layers of skin and bacteria and makes the surface of the hands sufficiently clean.

But there still remains the danger that many microbes which stay concealed in the tiny crevices at the base of the little hair glands will be forced to the surface by perspiration and the use of the hands in handling instruments and make an infection of the wound possible. While practical experience shows that his danger is very slight, yet its possibility is sufficient to make it undesirable ever to operate with the bare hands.—New York American.

SHOOTING THE RAPIDS.

Feats of the Arab Boys of Egypt, Who Are Expert Swimmers.

Among the most expert of swimmers are the Arab boys of Egypt. Like all other boys, they are fond of displaying their skill before strangers. This is how they shoot the rapids of the Nile:

Seating themselves astride a log of wood about six feet long and buoyant enough to support them waist high out of water, they ride it with the seat and gestures of a jockey and with hands and feet keep it straight with the line of the current.

The fall is shot with an ease and grace that do away with the sense of danger one would expect to feel at seeing a human being hurled along amid such a boil and turmoil of waters, but once at the bottom the youngsters have a hard struggle to induce their "horses" to turn out of the course.

To do this they avail themselves of the impetus acquired by the log in its shoot, and, throwing themselves full length upon it, they seem, with a sudden stroke from the left leg and arm, to drive it and themselves out of the current.

To fail in this would be dangerous even to Arab swimmers. Immediately below lie ugly rocks on which the heavy stream breaks with great violence.—Exchange.

They Were Solid.

Doubtless you have heard the story of the retired contractor who had engaged an artist to paint a portrait of his daughter. "Mind you," he said to the astonished artist, "I want none of your cheap slapdash work—three good coats."

Which bonmot leads me up to the story that a teacher in one of the west side schools told me the other day about a little girl. Her parents, it seems, had been celebrating their silver wedding, and little Rosie the next morning, with commendable family pride, was boasting of the quality of the presents received.

"There was a whole set," she said, "of solid silver teaspoons."

"Are you sure, Rosie," asked the teacher, "that the spoons were solid?"

"Oh, yes," was the reply triumphant, "solid silver—triple plate."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Candle Power.

In computing candle power it must be remembered that as there are many different sizes of candles the rate of burning and intensity of light radiated would vary, so that the standard candle, upon which England and the United States agree, must be used. This standard candle is made of pure spermaceti, exactly round, seven-eighths inch in diameter and of a length such that six weigh one pound, and with wick adjusted to burn 120 grains of spermaceti per hour. And the 1,000,000 candle power searchlight must emit a light equal to 1,000,000 standard candles.—New York American.

HOW TO DANCE THE TANGO, No. 2

By ODGERS T. GURNEE

Illustrated With Specially Posed Photographs

WITH millions of devotees and thousands of denouncers, the modern dance craze has been a bone of contention in almost every corner of the civilized world.

There is little doubt that in their original form the dances of today were improper, but after passing through the mill of public usage they have been so renovated as to be absolutely unobjectionable at the present time.

The present mode of the tango calls for the Parisian steps in place of the South American style, which was the rage last year. However, some of the Argentine steps are very attractive, and a description of them will not be amiss.

The deep dip, forward and backward, is one of the essential figures from this dance and should be done as follows:

Start from the open tango position, as shown in the accompanying illustration, take three steps forward, and on the fourth step bend forward till the knee almost touches the floor. In all open steps start with the outside foot, so that in the forward dip the outside feet are advanced. Rising from this position, take three more steps, swing the inside foot forward, then back, turn on the outside foot and dip back with the inside foot. In this manner you have turned halfway around and are facing in the opposite direction. The foot which was formerly on the outside is now inside and vice versa. Take three steps forward, repeat step and you are straightened out again.

Another pretty step is as follows:

Take three walking steps, swing outside foot in front of inside foot and drag back three times. This sounds very simple, but is really quite difficult, as the drags must not be jerky.

These are the three principal steps of the Argentine as introduced in this country, and countless other steps can be devised to accompany them.

A hint for a few semi-original steps may be gleaned from the following:

A flirtation step, such as is danced in the maxixe, standing behind the girl and going from one side to another.

A step similar to the hesitation, man going forward and girl going backward.

The man stands still crossing, one foot in front of the other, while the girl does a series of steps halfway around him and then back again to original position.

These steps of the girl's can be changed at will and offer many opportunities for original thought.

Rowley Downs, Jr., who has been in the foremost ranks of dancers since the craze started, explains the dance craze as follows:

"Many persons are anxious to know why the dances have become so popular. Like all other amusements that are taken up by the majority, there is bound to be constant improvement. In the dances of the present this improvement has been along the lines of less effort and greater simplicity. For instance, the hesitation is only one-half the step of the original waltz, and the one step cuts down the effort of two stepping by half.

"This explains why so many older men and women have taken up the craze and find it so attractive. A moderate amount of dancing is excellent exercise and helps to keep the body fit where many medicines might fail.

"By the introduction of a new tempo occasionally the public interest is kept at a high pitch, and some one is always learning a new step. For instance, the tango arrived just in time to save the jaded turkey trot, the Maxixe did the same for the tango, and now an attractive new rhythm in waltz motif is the seven-quarter time of our new dance—the moderation.

"This is a perfect combination of tango and Viennese waltz and lends itself splendidly to ballroom usage.

"So long as a new tempo or a new step can be devised the interest in dancing will continue."

Astronomers say that the tango will last till 1924. Which does not mean that the archbishop of New York, the kaiser of Berlin or the Duchess of Norfolk in London will not triumph in their views upon the subject.

POSITION FOR THE OPEN STEP IN THE TANGO.

The tango of the astronomers is the tango type, the poetry of motion, the Maxixe also and all those dances of graceful attitudes and syncopated measure, chefs d'oeuvre of rhythm and gesture, the negation of romp and the whirling dervish movement.

But we may even see folks waltz, for we are in a dancing period. It is the sun's fault.

Everybody knows that sun spots regulate dancing, and as it is a critical period of solar activity none may hope—and few would desire—to keep folks from being charmed by rhythmic movement.

Which leads to the fact that there is a time to dance and a time to tire of dancing. The sun's periods of eleven years, its maximums of thirty-three years and grand maximum of once a century correspond perfectly to the waltz of 1812, the gallop of 1829 (which also ushered in the schottische), the mazurka of 1836, the polka of 1845, the quadrille of 1852, the lancers of 1861, the cancan of 1869, the pas de quatre of 1882, the Boston of 1893, the cakewalk of 1902 and the tango of 1913.

Dip From the Argentine Tango

ALTHOUGH not suitable for ballroom dancing, this step from the Argentine is very effective. It is usually preceded by three open walking steps, a point or swing and then the dip. When on a crowded floor the same step can be used by moderating the dip a little.

The movements must be slow and timed to the music in this dance. Don't stand away from your partner and make sure that you are both doing the same thing at the same time.

Skating Step In the Maxixe

Posed by Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle.

THIS is considered by many the prettiest step in the Maxixe. Starting from the position shown in the picture, step forward with the left foot, touching the heel to the floor. Follow up with the right foot in the regular Maxixe step; then repeat on the other side, making a deep sliding dip on the second count. It must be remembered that the dip comes only when doing the right hand step and is on the second count. The left step is an ordinary Maxixe straightaway.

An easy and graceful recovery following the dip must be acquired, as an ugly position in this part of the movement will spoil the whole effect of the dance.

Flirtation Step From the Maxixe

Posed by Mr. and Mrs. Rowley Downs.

WHEN danced correctly this is a very charming and effective step. Care must be taken not to force the action and thus lose the proper rhythm. The step is simplicity itself. Starting with the girl directly in front of the man, do the ordinary Maxixe step on alternate feet. The girl takes small steps, merely turning her head from side to side, while the man must take long steps, so that her head will touch first his left shoulder and then the right.

FOUND IN THE SNOW

A Rescue and a Romance

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Dell Pearson faced her father across the library table. Her face was pale and resolute, and her eyes shone strangely.

"Father," she said firmly, "you cannot make me marry Hugo Forest against my will. I am of age, and even if Cousin Fortescue did leave me $500,000 with the understanding that I was to marry the son of his old friend I would forfeit the money rather than marry a man whom I do not love!"

"Bravo, my dear!" smiled her father approvingly. "While $500,000 is not to be sneezed at in these mercenary days, still I'd rather have my girl marry a man who, though penniless, has very much the making of a man in him than a good for nothing gilded fool. Of course Fortescue has hinted that which ever one of the two beneficiaries under his singular will declines to marry the other, according to his stipulations, that one will forfeit his money."

"I am glad that my refusal to marry Mr. Forest will not affect his enjoyment of his $500,000," Dell sighed relievedly.

Mr. Pearson smiled dryly. His finger tapped an open letter under his hand.

"Your feelings are very creditable, my dear, and I am sure that young Forest would appreciate your position, only"— He hesitated such a long time that Dell became impatient and prompted him.

"Only?"

"Only, you see, Hugo Forest refuses to sell himself for $500,000. He expresses himself very delicately. You may read his letter, my dear."

"Well, it is settled, then, daddy. And I am glad that you are worth a few millions yourself so that I am not causing you any distress by going my own sweet way."

Mr. Pearson looked at her keenly.

"And if I told you that my millions had dwindled to a bare hundred thousand in the last year, daughter?" he questioned gravely.

Dell gasped faintly.

"Daddy Pearson—that changes the matter entirely—if you need it in your business"— She suddenly faltered and blushed and hid her face on his shoulder. "If you need it I could marry him, father, but not unless you do."

"I wouldn't have you furnish me with money in that manner," said James Pearson, smoothing back the fair hair from her broad forehead and looking deep into her true, blue eyes. "We can get along without the Fortescue money. And, besides, we forget that Master Forest has declined the honor!"

Della blushed scarlet.

"Of course! How stupid of me! Well, the incident is closed. And if evil times have fallen on the business, daddy, please tell me how to economize."

"I've thought it over. We must lop off all the motorcars save the limousine and your runabout. We must close up the house and lease it for a year, furnished, while I make that business trip abroad. When I return we will stop at a hotel until the year is up. Cousin Madeline will be glad to come on and chaperon you. I'd like to take you abroad with me, but I'll confess it would add mightily to my expenses."

"Don't mind; I've decided in an instant what to do with myself during your absence."

"And what is that, Miss Independence?" asked Pearson, kissing her pink ear.

"I'm going to Big Horn to pay a long promised visit to the Appletons."

* * * * * * *

Big Horn was a large town in Alberta, and the Appletons, who were Canadians and old friends of the Pearsons, welcomed Dell into the large family with a cordiality that brought tears to the girl's eyes.

"Now that winter is coming on you will enjoy all our snow sports," promised Alice as she lingered in Dell's room before going to bed that first night. "We have a fine slide beyond the pine forest. Father had it built. It's a mile and a half to the bottom. Wait until we have another heavy snowfall and a good freeze after it!"

"I can wait," laughed Dell, snuggling under the eiderdown comfortables.

But when snow came the very next day she could hardly wait for Alice to finish her music lesson and give her a first lesson on walking with snowshoes.

So Dell, who was adventurous, put on the pretty white tobogganing costume of white angora which she had provided, tossed a white fox stole about her throat and, swinging snowshoes over her shoulder, set forth in the midst of the snowstorm.

When she was out of sight of the house, where no one could observe her ridiculous maneuvers, she slipped on the broad shoes and made her way on the crust of new snow among the pine trees back of the house.

The sport was fascinating. Dell quite forgot the lapse of time. The location was strange, and she took no heed, and presently she took a wrong turning, lost her bearings and came to an open tract of unbroken snow bordered on three sides by forest.

"I'll cross this field to the trees, and then I'll go home. Alice will be surprised to find how well I have learned by myself," thought Dell proudly as she skimmed over the snow with all an amateur's heedless enjoyment of the treacherous snowshoes.

Before she reached the forest the ground inclined sharply to a deep gully. Dell was upon the brink before she realized the danger. Then it was too late. Her shoe caught in a half covered root, and she plunged down to the bottom of the gully, where she lay unconscious while the snow drifted silently over her like a pale blanket.

At dusk the Appleton home was in a frenzy of excitement. They had been searching for Dell Pearson for four hours, and no sign of her had been discovered. Mr. Appleton had telephoned to the mounted police and asked for assistance, and a searching party had set forth to look for the lost girl.

The little file of mounted policemen trailed out of the avenue and separated. The troopers, under orders from their captain, rode down to distant points on the road with the intention of beating back through the forest. Of course there was a limit to the distance the girl might have traveled, and the captain had taken this into consideration. For himself he had chosen the piece of snow covered country across which Dell had skimmed so blithely on her new snowshoes.

And so it was the captain of them all who came tearing up the avenue and into the Appleton home with a silent white burden in his strong arms. He had applied restoratives as soon as he discovered the girl, and she had opened her eyes upon him once and smiled drowsily before trying to resume her slumber.

Dell was revived, and before the captain departed Mr. Appleton insisted that he come to dinner the next evening.

He accepted the invitation, and it was not until he had departed that the Appletons looked at one another and laughed.

"We don't even know his name," they cried. "But he'll come all right," added young Tom Appleton sagely. "He's struck all of a heap with Dell. Any one could see that with half an eye! Jove, but he's a big chap! They say he's brave and has no end of medals."

The next evening Dell was well enough to come down to dinner, and it was with a faint stirring of interest that she awaited the coming of the captain who had found her in the snow. She remembered a dark, strong face bending above her own, and she had felt a strange confidence in him as he picked her up in his strong arms with a murmured word of pity and carried her home.

Dell was alone in the room when Mr. Appleton came in from the library, where he had been entertaining the captain since his arrival. Dell in her white evening gown looked very lovely as she arose and held out her hand to her rescuer. He appeared more of a giant than ever in his well fitting evening clothes, and she wondered a little as Mr. Appleton made the introduction.

"Dell, let me present Captain Forest. Captain, I am sure Miss Pearson will want to thank you for saving her life."

"Captain — Forest?" faltered Dell wondering.

"And—Dell Pearson? Is it possible you are James Pearson's daughter?" asked the amazed policeman.

"Yes—and—oh, dear, but it's very amusing," bubbled Dell.

"Permit me to say that it's not amusing to me. It's a serious matter," corrected the captain. "I—I hope you didn't see that letter I wrote to your father."

"I did," admitted Dell as he came and sat beside her on the sofa, "and I want to tell you how much father and I liked the letter."

Captain Forest frowned and bit his lip.

"It was a hard letter to write," he said at last, "but if—if I had known you first—well, pardon me, Miss Pearson, but I must tell you the rest another time."

Dell's heart was fluttering curiously. The remainder of the party had entered the room, and they were waiting the summons to dinner. There was a bustle of arrival in the hall and presently James Pearson was announced.

When the confusion of his greeting was over he explained that for business reasons he had been obliged to postpone his trip for another month, and he had come to join his daughter among the Canadian snows.

It was after dinner, while the men of the party were on their way to join the ladies in the drawing room, when Captain Forest laid a hand on Mr. Pearson's sleeve.

"Pardon me, sir," he said with his quiet smile, "I am wondering if I may retract the terms of the letter I sent to you."

"Why?" asked Pearson with Yankee directness.

"Because I've changed my mind," returned Forest.

"And you desire to marry for the Fortescue fortune?" rapped out Pearson with a twinkle in his eyes.

"Not exactly, sir. I wish to marry for love, and I'm afraid I'm going to get tangled up in that money after all," admitted the captain, "if I should be successful in my wooing."

"Ah!" smiled Pearson understandingly, for he had read their telltale eyes across the dinner table.

So it happened that the terms of the Fortescue will were carried out to the letter in spite of the fact that the interested parties married for love alone. And in addition James Pearson gained a son, such a son as he had always yearned for, and Dell won the man of her dreams, and Forest himself took to his manly heart his ideal woman whom he had found in the snow.

Primaries, Tuesday, May 19th.

Vote for Charles H. Rowland for Congress at Tuesday's primaries and get in line to give him an overwhelming majority next November.

The unlucky candidates at Tuesday's primaries will have ample opportunity to reflect on the large number of liars one meets in a day's travel.

If Vance McCormick is the next Governor of Pennsylvania there are a lot of old-time Democrats who will have to move out of Centre County.

An eastern county Judge recently sentenced a man to buy his wife a bonnet. Heretofore a term in jail has been regarded as the extreme of cruelty.

If you are too indifferent to vote next Tuesday don't complain if all the nominations are not to your liking. We seldom have every-thing just as we want it.

Regardless of political lines, let Bellefonte hospitality assert itself today with a cordial greeting to the distinguished visitor, United States Senator Penrose.

If Vance McCormick is nominated and elected Governor the Hon. Jim. Schofield and the Hon. John Noll threaten to move to Siberia as a means of finding real comfort in living.

If anybody has heard of a regular Democrat in Centre County being appointed to anything under the administration of President Wilson we would like to learn of the fact. Don't all stand up at once.

The Republican candidates for nomination for State Senator in this district are A. A. Dale, Cal. C. Hoover and Dr. S. J. Miller. Any one of the three will be a strong nominee on the ticket in November.

The private yacht of the Surveyor of the Port is tied to the dock and the boss is on the firing line to whip Centre County Democrats into line for Palmer and McCormick. Blessed be the meek and lowly.

Republicans will chose between C. L. Gramley and Harry B. Scott for a nominee for Representative in the Assembly at Harrisburg. May each enter the fight for honors on Tuesday with a firm determination to help elect the other no matter which wins.

If you are a business man whose business has been hurt rather than helped by the Democratic tariff law, go to the primaries next Tuesday and vote accordingly. Remember that the Democratic promise was that a new tariff law would help, not hurt, business.

When you are about to cast your vote for Boies Penrose or J. Benjamin Dimmick for United States Senator decide for yourself which in your judgment will be best able to represent the interests of employer and employe at Washington. When you vote this way you will be voting right.

It is to be sincerely hoped that all Republicans will do their fighting before and not after the primaries. A good scrap in the party before the primaries is all right, but a fight within the ranks after the nominations are made usually means Democratic success. We are now experiencing the kind of times that travel with Democratic success.

The man out of a job, or on reduced time, or lower wages, will have his little opportunity at the primaries on Tuesday to show how much he likes the Democratic way of doing things. The Democratic platform guaranteed higher wages and lower prices. The guarantee wasn't worth the paper on which it was written.

Do you observe that although examinations for fourth-class postmasters for Centre County were held one month ago no appointments have been made as yet? And none will be made until after the primaries are held and each Democratic aspirant delivers the goods for the Palmer—McCormick ticket. We might note that the Palmer—McCormick outfit claims to stand for reform and the higher ideals in politics.

ITS UP TO YOU

On Tuesday, next, May 19th, the primaries will be held. There are to be nominated candidates for United States Senator, Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of Internal Affairs, Supreme Court Justice, Superior Court Justice, Congressmen-at-Large, and in this district a member of Congress, a State Senator and member of the Assembly in the State Legislature. What are you going to do about it?

This is the age of the direct primaries. Under the present system the nomination of candidates lies directly in the hands of the common people. In the polling place all voters stand on equal ground. One man's vote is as good and means as much as that of another. If good candidates are to be nominated the people must nominate them. If good candidates are not nominated it will be the fault of the people. No longer can it be charged up to political bosses if worthy men are not placed on the ticket to be voted on in November.

Boies Penrose and J. Benjamin Dimmick are rival aspirants for Republican nomination for United States Senator. One must have more votes than the other to be nominated. As a voter you have it in your power to aid in the selection of the best man for the nomination. It is your duty to exercise this privilege. See to it that you go to the polls and cast your vote for the man you honestly believe will render for you and your neighbor the best and most beneficial service at Washington.

For Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh has no serious opposition on the Republican ticket. Since the first mention of his name as a candidate he has grown wonderfully in the public esteem. As head of the Philadelphia public schools, a man actively identified with the noble cause of education throughout his entire life, he is well and favorably known to the people throughout the State. His nomination next Tuesday is assured and calm observers are of the belief that the tide now running in his behalf will sweep him into a glorious election in November. For Lieutenant Governor former Representative Frank B. McClain, of Lancaster, has virtually no opposition for the Republican nomination. As the "Red Rose of Lancaster," Frank McClain is known from one end of the State to the other. As Speaker of the House at Harrisburg he endeared himself to members, old and new, by his fearless policy of playing everything above-board and according a square deal to all. Personally clean and honest, and independent to the point of never surrendering self-respect, he stands high in the confidence and esteem of Republicans and many Democrats in all sections of the commonwealth.

For Supreme Court Justice there are a number of strong, well qualified jurists mentioned. The group includes Judge Kunkel, of Harrisburg; Judge Frazer, of Pittsburgh, and Judge Walling, of Erie. All three are men of the very highest type. Judge Kunkel, it will be recalled, presided over the trials resulting from the capital graft scandals. Judge Frazer has the united support of the Allegheny County bar. Judge Walling is being urged as a candidate by leading lawyers of the great northwestern section of the State.

Secretary of Internal Affairs Henry Houck is without opposition for renomination on the Republican ticket. He well deserves another term. Superior Court Justice Trexler is a comparatively new man on the bench, but his record thus far is greatly in his favor and he is seeking nomination on the Republican ticket to a full term. He is strongly indorsed by the leading lawyers of his home section.

General Albert Logan, of Pittsburgh, is an aspirant for Republican nomination for Congress-at-large and enters the primaries with the prestige of warm, loyal support from numerous friends.

For Congress in the Centre-Clearfield, Cameron-McKean district, Charles H. Rowland, of Philipsburg, has no opposition for the Republican nomination. This is Centre County's turn for the honor and Mr. Rowland's nomination happily is assured. A man of such wide business affairs naturally is conversant with the business needs of the four counties comprising the district and would be an able representative at Washington. Getting down to the nomination for State Senator there are three Republican aspirants for the honor. They are A. A. Dale, of of Centre County, and Cal. C. Hoover and Dr. S. J. Miller, both from Clearfield County. In a three-cornered contest such as this the result is always uncertain. There is likewise a contest for the Republican nomination for the Assembly. Representative C. L. Gramley is seeking a second term, which is usually accorded, and his opponent is Harry B. Scott, of Philipsburg.

Every Republican who goes to the primaries will know in advance who the candidates are, and he should vote for those he believes will best represent the people. Let every Republican do his duty by voting, and once the nominations are made let all Republicans stand together for the ticket from top to bottom.

Better Fruit Talks.

The subject of better care of the fruit trees is becoming popularized more generally throughout our County, since a number of the more progressive fellows have caught the idea that it pays to take care of fruit trees that in turn pay good dividends. Possibly more owners of orchards will spray their trees this year in Centre County than ever before. This fact is commendable Since the season is unusally late and the liklihood of the State Demonstrator being unable to reach some of his scheduled list of Demonstrations, and which in this case will affect Centre County, on account of its being the most northerly county in the district, embracing Perry Snyder Union and Centre, it is hoped that all will appreciate the fact that the Department is endeavoring to do the best it can under existing conditions for the benefit of the fruit growers of the state. This being the case, the representative of the Division of Zoology, Mr. T. C. Foster, has asked the Bellefonte Republican to kindly give the following information through our columns for the benefit of our readers who anticipate spraying for "better fruit." Please observe the following, viz.

Do not spray before the petals have practically all dropped. There is an interval of 7 to 10 days in which to perform the work.

For all pome fruits (apple, pear and quince) use 5 quarts lime and sulphur solution (concentrated) and 2 pounds lead arsenate paste to 49 gallons of water.

For all stone fruits (peach, plum and cherry) use 3 quarts lime and sulphur (concentrated) and 2 pounds lead arsenate paste to 49 gallons water.

For Assembly

HARRY B. SCOTT

Harry B. Scott, of Philipsburg borough, is a candidate for Republican nomination for the Assembly, at Harrisburg, and as such will appreciate your support at the primaries on Tuesday, May 19th.

Mr. Scott became a candidate at the earnest solicitation of his home people of Philipsburg. He has been identified with every movement for the betterment of his home community and is well qualified to serve the best interests of all the people of Centre County at Harrisburg.

In the short time that Mr. Scott has been in the field as a candidate he has not had the opportunity to make a personal canvass of the entire county. In the event of his nomination it will be his aim to make a thorough canvass.

In the event of his election to the Legislature Mr. Scott pledges himself to faithfully represent the wishes of the people of Centre County.

When you go to the polls on Tuesday, next, mark an X in the square opposite the name of Harry B. Scott.

HOAXED THE STATESMEN.

And at the Same Time Paul Birault Proved His Proposition.

Paul Birault, a writer on the Paris Eclair, contended that too many statues were being erected all over France to obscure heroes, too many official speeches made to celebrate intellectual nonenities, and Radical politicians generally are the blindest leaders of the blind.

To prove his theory that this was due to the fact that the living were delighted by public posing, he invented a celebrity to glorify and called him Hegesippe Simon. No such man ever existed, but he described him in his letter as a most wonderful precursor of modern light and progress. To give his letter a certain importance he headed it with a motto to the following effect, "Darkness fades when the sun rises," representing it as the most remarkable dictum of the remarkable Hegesippe Simon.

Under this glorious motto he placed the title of his bogus committee, which he dubbed "public committee for the celebration of the centenary of Hegesippe Simon." He selected the names of 100 Radical deputies in alphabetical order and sent them each a letter, in which he said: "Thanks to the liberality of a generous donor, the disciples of Hegesippe Simon are now enabled to erect a statue in his honor. We desire to inscribe your name as an honorary member of the committee to celebrate the centenary of this great educator of democracy."

Birault received letters of acceptance from a large number of deputies, senators and ministers.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Jefferson and the Lawyers.

In the "Autobiography of Jefferson" is this passage:

"I served with General Washington in the legislature of Virginia before the Revolution," wrote Jefferson, "and during it with Dr. Franklin in congress. I never heard either of them speak ten minutes at a time, nor to any but the main point which was to decide the question. They laid their shoulders to the great points, knowing that the little ones would follow of themselves. If the present congress errs in too much talking, how can it be otherwise in a body to which the people send 150 lawyers, whose trade it is to question everything, yield nothing, talk by the hour? That 150 lawyers should do business together ought not to be expected."

Language of Music.

The members of a church choir not a hundred miles from Glasgow Cross are responsible for the following: "Allegro moderato—a famous Italian composer who wrote a large number of pieces; poco crescendo—a little swell; locomotive); staccato—stick to the notes; presto—turn over; interval—a short pause for refreshments; con due pedale—with cold feet!" Not so long ago, adds the Glasgow News, we heard a young lady in raptures over what she called Chopin's "Because," and it took us some time to discover that she meant Chopin's "Berceuse."

A Great Invention.

Mr. Edison is apt to be rather crusty with visitors to his workrooms when they ask too many questions.

One day a rather talkative journalist pointed at a model. "What's that?" he asked.

Mr. Edison, who was getting very weary of the man's endless questions, replied blandly: "That, my dear sir, is a cradle that rocks by sound. You put the baby in and the louder it howls the faster the cradle rocks!"—Pearson's Weekly.

The County at a Glance.

Scotia.

Republicans up here are interested in the visit of Senator Penrose to Centre County. The fellows who have not been earning as much lately as they got during Republican rule at Washington are doing some tall thinking about the Democratic tariff proposition. Some of the boys allowed themselves to be fooled by the promise of higher wages and lower prices for the things we eat and wear, but if anybody can put us on to where the cost of living is being reduced we would like to know it. It is not the cost but the kind of living that is being reduced now that the Democrats are in power. And this fact is piling up the popularity for Senator Penrose, the firm champion of protection. He is going to get the vote of the working man not only at the primaries next Tuesday but also at the election next November. Paste this is in your hat.

An Open Letter

To the Republican Voters of Centre County

I have announced my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Representative in the Assembly at Harrisburg, subject to the decision of the primaries, May 19, 1914.

For years all parties in Centre County have followed the custom of giving a Representative a re-nomination without a contest, but apparently my course has not received the approval needed to secure the nomination unanimously. I am nevertheless a candidate and while I will not make a thorough canvass for the nomination, I will work vigorously for success at the polls in November, in case I am nominated. I desire your support at the primaries, May 19, 1914 for by so doing you will but do what the party always did in the past, that is, granted a Representative a second nomination. I hope you may see the matter in the same light as I do—I am more competent to represent my county in the session of 1915, because of my experience in the session of 1913.

Thanking you in advance for what you may do for me at the primaries, I am,

Yours very respectfully,

C. L. GRAMLEY.

Big Real Estate Deal.

Leathers Brothers, the well known real estate men, of Howard, who conducted one of their famous lot sales in State College in 1909, which was a great success, and at that time had more people in the town of State College on one day than any day before or since, have just taken over the Andrew Lytle farm there. This is one of the largest real estate deals ever handled in Centre County. This farm is at State College, and is one of the most desirable points for building at that place. The property adjoins that sold by Leathers Brothers a few years ago. They are planning within a few weeks to have an auction lot sale for two days.

At the present time the engineers are at work plotting and putting this attractive piece of property in selling condition. It is located in the section where the last survey was made by the railroad company. Many believe that there must be something officially done in this direction, as this firm has had this property under option for some time. We look forward to this being two big days for Centre county, as these men have held sales in a good many counties throughout the state, and their ability in handling real estate is well known.

The property which they sold in 1909 is practically all built up, and is in the most attractive part of State College. We have not learned if the company will run a free train as they did before, but they no doubt will. Last year with their novel way of handling real estate they gave away automobiles at their various lot sales. It has not been announced, but we rather expect that they will have something in store for this large sale. Later you will see more about this sale in this paper.

At the last sale conducted by this firm in State College they gave away a free lot, which no doubt a great many of our readers will recall. Miss Irene McGinley who was employed by the Shirt Factory at Bellefonte was the fortunate one to win the lot.

Arrested by State Officer.

The Tyrone Herald says: C. W. Tyson, who is employed at Stanley's livery stable last Thursday was arrested on an information made by F. V. Filbert, agent and attorney-in-fact for the state board of veterinary physician and surgeon examiners. It was shown by three witnesses at the hearing which followed the arrest that Tyson had given medicine and performed surgical work in several cases without a license and without registering with the state board of examiners or in the prothonotary's office, as required by the acts of assembly, and that while he asked no fee, he accepted money handed to him, in one case, being given $10. The examination was conducted by Mr. Filbert, who is an attorney-at-law, located at Auburn, Schuylkill county. It was also shown that Tyson had been warned by the board of examiners that his work was unlawful but he continued to practice. He was held in $200 bail for his appearance at court.

Kenna—Thomas.

Miss Edna M. Thomas, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Thomas, of Osceola, formerly of Philipsburg, was married on Wednesday evening of last week to James M. Kenna, a popular young resident of the former place.

Died in South Dakota.

Captain Oliver W. VanValin, a native of Unionville, this county, died suddenly Friday of last week at his home in South Dakota. He was a veteran of the civil war, where he won the rank of captain.

H. B. Scott Indorsed.

At a joint meeting of the several fire companies of Philipsburg resolutions were adopted indorsing Harry B. Scott for nomination on the Republican ticket for the Assembly at Harrisburg.

Miss Minnie Wilkinson Dead.

Miss Minnie Wilkinson died at her mother's home on Allegheny Street at 5.30 o'clock Monday afternoon after a brief illness. The news of her death was received with sorrow by many warm, admiring friends. She had not enjoyed the best of health for some time past and for a few weeks had remained inside the house. Her illness took a serious turn on Sunday night and she gradually became weaker until she passed away. The deceased was born in Yardville N. J. and was a daughter of Mrs. E. J. and the late William H. Wilkinson. Throughout her life she was deeply interested in religious and charitable affairs and by many who knew her intimately she will long be held in loving memory. Funeral services will be held today at 3 o'clock. Following a brief service at the home there will be services at St. John's Protestant Episcopal church. Interment will be made in the Union cemetery.

Henry Martin Stover Dead.

Henry Martin Stover died at his late home at Axe Mann at 9.20 o'clock Saturday night, last, from a complication of ailments. Deceased was born at Housserville and was a son of Uriah and Sallie Stover. He was aged 52 years in November, last. Twenty-eight years ago on the seventh of the present month he was married to Miss Sallie Stone, who survives with these children: Eve, Jennie, Orville, James, Joseph, at home; John, who is married and resides in Illinois; Uriah, of Bellefonte; Myrtle, of Osceola; Louise and Stevens. Surviving also are these brothers and sisters: Catherine, of Axe Mann; Dent, of Lewistown: Agnes, of Penns valley; Minerva, who resides in the Nittany mountains. Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Methodist Episcopal church at Axe Mann, conducted by Rev. D. J. Frum. The interment was under the auspices of Bellefonte Lodge of Moose, No 206, of which the deceased was a member.

Death of a Child.

Grace Louise Talhelm, daughter of Maurice E. and Elsie Talhelm, died at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Lukens, of 217 Crawford avenue, Altoona, last Friday evening at 6 o'clock, of nephritis. She was born April 7, 1904, being aged 10 years 1 month, and 1 day. She was a student at the Washington school Altoona, and attended the Second United Brethren Sunday school at that place.

Miss Alma C. Maurer Dead.

Miss Alma C. Maurer, daughter of the late Nathan and Catharine Maurer, died early last Sunday morning at the Gardner home, near Mackeyville, aged 72 years. She was long active in church and W. C. T. U. affairs. Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Laura Gardner and Miss Anna Maurer. Interment was made in the Disciple cemetery near Salona.

Death of Infant.

William Oliver, the seven months old child of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Guiser, of near Wolf's Store, died on Monday evening. Funeral services were held today, conducted by Rev. Mr. Geesey. The sympathy of many friends is with the bereaved parents.

Ward Fleming a Secretary.

M. Ward Fleming, of Philipsburg, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Fleming, of this place, has been appointed one of the secretaries of the Republican County Executive Committe. His appointment was made some time ago by County Chairman J. Linn Harris and should have been announced in this newspaper last week instead of the name of Harry B. Scott, of Philipsburg. Mr. Scott was originally appointed a secretary but resigned when he concluded to become a candidate for Republican nomination for the Assembly. Ward Fleming's old home friends are glad to learn of his appointment to active duty with the County Committee.

Maybe He Got It Back.

Brown and Jones were leaning on a polished counter and talking intimately. Then said Brown to Jones:

"Look here, old man. Suppose you were to come around to my apartments one of these days and should walk up to my room and, receiving no answer to your knock, should come in and find my lifeless body stretched out cold across the bed. Now, in a case like that, what would you do?"

"I'll tell you," answered Jones after thinking it over. "I'd institute an immediate search for the $5 you have owed me for two years."—Exchange.

Good Advice.

Don't live beyond your income, no matter how small it is.

Don't live up to your income. Save at least 10 per cent of it every month and if possible 40 per cent.

Don't let money lie idle. It is the fractions that count. Put every bit of surplus in a savings bank quickly, and every time $100 accumulates invest it.

Don't pay for show, but for value received.—Louisville Post.

Magnet Mountain

The Story of Its Power of Attraction

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Linn Ellison looked at his compass for a long time before he reached out and held it up to his companion's eyes.

"What did I tell you, Baker?" he asked quietly.

Baker rubbed his red hair perplexedly. "It certainly does act cantankerous," he admitted. "If any one should ask me I'd say that there was a very powerful magnet close by; but, as for making me believe that Magnet mountain is really and truly magnetic, it can't be done."

"What is the matter with my compass and your watch?" demanded Linn.

"Don't bother me with batty questions," answered Baker loftily. "Permit me to pursue my study of the classics in peace." And he folded back the pages of his paper backed detective story, propped his elbows on the ground near the bright firelight and read absorbedly.

Linn laughed and stretched his long limbs.

"Surely McOlin must have had some authority for his statement that there existed in this vicinity a mountain with strong magnetic powers," he mused, turning over the pages of Dr. McOlin's "Wanderings In Out of the Way Places." "Here he speaks of the peculiar behavior of his delicate instruments and of his visit to the mountain and how his suspicions were confirmed. He sends his book to his publishers in New York and thenceforth drops out of sight entirely. No one knows what has become of Sandy McOlin. I wonder."

Baker looked up and grinned.

"Still wondering about the mountain?" he gibed.

"They call it 'Magnet mountain,'" contended Linn, scowling earnestly.

"They named me Percy Rollo Baker, but do I look like it?" demanded the strong featured giant sarcastically.

Linn stretched himself again, arose and sauntered out from the trees into the moonlight.

"I'm going for a walk," he called back.

"Don't get too near the mountain!" sang Baker, his nose deep in the book.

Across the open patch of moonlight and into the narrow trail that wound through the spruces on the hillside Linn Ellison found himself undergoing strange sensations. A new and powerful vitality seemed to possess him as he mounted upward. At the top of the hill he paused for a moment, looking up at the majestic grandeur of the snow capped peak of Magnet mountain. Bathed in moonlight, the peak glistened like polished silver, and somewhere below, among the black pines that clothed the sides, there gleamed a yellow light.

"I wonder!" muttered Linn again.

Now he plunged down the trail and crossed a little valley, to climb steadily up the opposite slope toward the silver peak of Magnet mountain.

He lost sight of the yellow light immediately, and his way up the mountain led through untracked forests of pine and fir and spruce. His feet slipped on the fallen needles, and in his nostrils was the sweet pungency of balsamic odors. He was panting a little when he paused to rest. Throwing himself down under the low spreading branches of a giant spruce, he gave himself up to the weariness that oppressed his eyelids.

He slept.

Linn Ellison awoke with a start to find that the moonlight had invaded his resting place. He sat up and looked dazedly at the apparition that flitted across the space and hovered in the shadows.

It was a girl clad in a short skirted khaki costume. Her little feet, in high tan boots, were plainly visible, while her face was in deep shadow, but Linn saw that she was slender, lithe and graceful and that her slim fingers were clasped about the barrel of a shotgun. There was a tantalizing uncertainty about the face that could not be seen.

"Who is there?" he asked sharply.

A quick little sigh answered him, followed by a sweet, quavering voice:

"Who are you? Oh, who are you?" she inquired.

"Then you are alive after all!" exclaimed Linn joyously, for no reason that he could explain. "Upon my word, I thought you were a ghost!"

"Who are you?" repeated the girl more steadily, as if reassured by the sound of his voice. "Please tell me what you are doing here."

"I am here for the shooting. Surely, this isn't private property?"

"Oh, no! Only I needed help, and I wondered if you could be trusted." She came forward then, and the moonlight revealed the secret of her face.

Linn Ellison stared speechlessly at her.

"I need help," she repeated, with a quiver in her voice.

"Forgive me," cried Linn. "I can be trusted, be assured of that. What can I do?"

"My father is ill. We have a little camp up yonder, and I need brandy and medicines for him. There is no one to send, and I cannot go alone."

"I have a small medicine case in my pocket," was Linn's prompt reply. "Take me to your father, and I will do what I can for him. After that you may call upon me or my companion for any aid you need. Baker can ride back to Red Fork for anything you require."

"Thank you," she said briefly. "Follow me, please."

Soon they emerged into a small cleared space, where the embers of a fire glowed sullenly in a stone faced hole before a small group of tents.

The girl tossed a pine knot on the fire and fastened back the flaps of one of the tents. She lighted a lantern and hung it from the tent pole.

"Come in, please," she said hurriedly to Linn.

He bent his tall head and entered. It was sparsely furnished with a narrow cot, some empty boxes, covered with rugs; a folding camp table and some leather traveling cases piled in one corner.

On the cot was the gaunt form of an old man. His white hair framed a delicate, wrinkled face, whose black eyes stared piercingly at the stranger.

"Joyce, who is that man?" he demanded feebly.

The girl laid her hand on his forehead.

"He is a friend I found in the forest, father," she soothed him. "He has a medicine case, and I'm sure he has something that will do you good."

Linn came forward, tossed his cap aside and sat down by the bed.

"My name is Linn Ellison," he said frankly. "I'm here for the shooting. My guide and companion is down at my camp across the valley. Your daughter tells me you are ill and in need of medicine. I will do what I can for you, sir, and Baker will ride to Red Fork for anything else you may need."

"You are very kind," said the old man tremulously. "It is all my fault, this predicament. Not a word, Joyce, my dear. Let me tell Mr. Ellison how I decided to prolong my stay here and how I persuaded you to spend the winter here and how I have been ill with fever and how all my men have deserted me and taken money and supplies with them, and"—

"Take some stimulant first and tell me the story afterward," urged Linn, opening the medicine case and taking out quinine and some compressed beef tablets.

Joyce brought a cup of hot water from a small spirit stove, and presently the sick man was gratefully sipping the strong beef tea.

When he had finished he said with a faint smile:

"Mr. Ellison, if I told you that I was Alexander McOlin would you be any the wiser for that information?"

"Dr. Sandy McOlin!" cried Linn incredulously. "Why, sir, your wonderful book is my closest companion, and only this evening I was wondering over your disappearance. What good luck!" He clasped the thin hand in both his own strong brown ones.

Dr. McOlin struggled to sit up, and Linn placed an arm under the bowed shoulders.

"The book!" repeated the doctor excitedly. "Is the book really out? I haven't seen it yet."

"If you will compose yourself to sleep, sir, I will have my copy of your book here by daylight."

When the regular breathing assured them that Dr. McOlin was indeed receiving the rest that he needed the girl and the man who had met only a brief hour ago passed out of the tent and stood before the campfire. In a moment the girl spoke:

"You are the first one who has happened this way for six months. I have had to depend upon my gun for much of our food. My meeting you tonight was the most wonderful blessing that could have happened. Many of the people hereabout are afraid to come to the mountain. There is a tradition that it is strongly magnetized, and of course father's investigations have in a measure confirmed the story, only there is nothing alarming about the fact; it is merely interesting. But after father had sent the last pages of his book manuscript to New York he conceived the idea of remaining here for the winter and pursuing his investigations. The result is that we have been here alone ever since the first month, when the six men who composed the party robbed my father of money and provisions and deserted us, leaving us with few stores and not even one pack horse. You can imagine our plight."

She smiled bravely into Linn's eyes.

"I am most happy that it is now over," said Linn, dizzy with the glance of her wonderful eyes.

The pink dawn was breaking above the distant ranges when Baker, pale and anxious, saw Linn Ellison come crashing through the thicket into their camp.

"What in thunderation"— he was beginning heatedly, when Linn held up a protesting hand.

"Magnet mountain did it," said that happy young man as he threw himself down before the fire.

"Magnet mountain!" repeated Baker, staring at him. "Do you mean to say you've been up on the mountain?"

"I've been there," returned the other.

"And found the magnet, I suppose?"

"And discovered the greatest attraction in the world," said Linn dreamily.

"Crazy as a loon!" muttered Baker. "All on account of that magnetized mountain. I do believe there's something in it after all."

And when he heard the whole story from Linn Ellison's lips and after he had seen Joyce McOlin herself the skeptical Baker had to admit that Magnet mountain did possess a powerful attraction.

"And I might have been the lucky fellow instead of you if I'd only gone prowling up the mountain and not pored over the classics," he grumbled, tossing his dime novel into the fire. "I always said that a taste for literature was a drawback sometimes."

THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

Those Who Are and Are Not Eligible to the House of Commons.

The British parliament consists of the king (or queen regnant), the lords spiritual and temporal and the commons. The crown virtually appoints the lords spiritual, and the peerages of the lords temporal have been created by the crown, but the members of the house of commons are elected.

Every male British subject of full age and sound mind is eligible unless he is a peer, a member of the clergy of the Roman Catholic church, the Church of England or the Church of Scotland, a judicial officer, a holder of an office under the crown which has been created since 1705 or a pensioner from the crown.

A member of the house of commons holds office until the dissolution of parliament by proclamation under the great seal. The king summons parliament to meet and prescribes the time and place of its meeting, prorogues and dissolves it and commands the writ for the election of members to the house of commons. The present statute law exacts the meeting of parliament once in three years, but the annual voting of supplies has superseded obsolete statutes.

In addition to the general elections held after the dissolution of a parliament, there are byelections, occurring when a seat has become vacant by the death of a member, by his succession to the peerage or by his acceptance of office under the crown.—New York Times.

Painfully Particular.

"If you refuse me this time," he said "I shall never ask you to be my wife again."

"Oh, please," replied the girl from Boston, "try to use better English. I never have been your wife. Why should you ask me to be your wife again?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Narrow Escape.

"Don't you regret your youth?"

"Sometimes," replied Mr. Growcher "And then again I'm kind o' glad to get away from the period of my existence when my supreme ambition was to be a good banjo player."—Washington Star

WHALES IN THE HUDSON.

They Gave the Dutch Colonists a Scare In the Winter of 1646.

In 1646 the colony of Rensselaerswijk had a very hard winter of it indeed. On the 25th of November the North river was closed and remained frozen for four months. A very high freshet followed, which destroyed a number of houses in the vicinity, nearly carried away the fort and inflicted considerable damage in the colony.

This, however, was not an unusual thing to the colonists, who in Holland had been accustomed to equally hard winters. Much worse was the appearance of a sea monster that they had never seen in their native country.

"At the same time as the freshet," says Antonie de Hooges, secretary of Rensselaerswijk, "there appeared before us a certain fish of considerable size, snow white in color, round in the body and blowing water out of his head. What it portended God the Lord only knew. At the same instant this fish appeared we had the first thunder and lightning this year." The public astonishment had scarcely subsided when "another monster was seen, estimated at forty feet in length, of a brown color, having fins in his back and ejecting water in like manner high in the air."

This fish "which had first ascended the river (the North river) stranded on his return to sea on an island some forty miles from the mouth of the river, near which place four others grounded this year."

This island goes since by the name of Walvisch or Whale island.—Gazette de Hollande.

Mazzini Loved London's Fogs.

What feature of London has the strongest appeal for the foreigner? Mazzini loved above all things else the London fogs.

"When you look up," he wrote, "the eye loses itself in a reddish, bell shaped vault, which always gives me, I don't know why, an idea of the phosphorescent light of the inferno. The whole city seems under a kind of spell and reminds me of the witches' scene in 'Macbeth' or the Brocksberg or the Witch of Endor. The passersby look like ghosts. One feels almost a ghost oneself."

And years after he had left London for Italy he writes to a friend, "I think very often under these radiant skies of the London fogs and always regretfully."—London Spectator.

Did His Part.

A little boy of five was invited to a children's party. The next day he was giving an account of the fun and said that each of the little visitors had contributed either a song, a recitation or music for the pleasure of the rest.

"Oh, poor little Jack!" said his mother. "How very unfortunate you could do nothing!"

"Yes, I could, mother," replied the young hopeful. "I stood up and said my prayers!"—San Francisco Star.

He Drew the Line.

Officer—What's the matter with that soup you're turning up your nose at? Private—It's full of sand and grit, sir. Officer—Now, look here, my man, did you come to camp to grumble or to serve your country? Private—Well, I did come to serve my country, sir, but not to eat it.—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE FARM HAND

A Story of a Flirtatious Couple

By MARY C. ETHEREDGE

Nancy Burrows was such a desperate flirt that her mother, who deprecated her treatment of young men, determined, instead of taking her to places for the summer where she would meet them, to pass their outing season on a farm. Mrs. Burrows selected a place in a very attractive region, but distant from any summer resort. Indeed, Miss Nancy was obliged to remain without any attention whatever unless her passion for winning hearts should lead her to prey upon the farm men.

There was no one in the house where Nancy and her mother boarded except the farmer and his wife and several little children. From the front porch or from her window looking out over the fields Nancy could see nothing that resembled a man except a scarecrow set up in the midst of some growing corn. "If I remain here long enough," she said to herself, "I do believe I'll be spooning with the scarecrow. Oh, my goody gracious! What shall I do?"

She thought of the summer hotels full of guests, the country places of friends whom she had visited, the tennis, the boating, the bathing, the music and dancing, and heaved a deep sigh. Then she went to her mother and promised that she would be good, very good, if she might be permitted to spend at least the month of August elsewhere. "You'll be good here," replied the stern parent, "simply because you can't help yourself. I shall certainly not again trust you where there is a man within a hundred miles."

"Don't you expect me ever to be married, mamma? Do you intend to make an old maid of me?"

"I certainly do expect you to be married, and that's the reason I have brought you here. When you get the sense into your head to understand that marriage is the most serious event in a woman's life I will let you out again among men. At present you seem to have no appreciation whatever of the sacredness of love."

From this speech it may be inferred that Mrs. Burrows was a strong woman, quite capable of controlling her daughter. The truth is she desired when Nancy married to have something to say about the man she should choose for a husband. With these flirtations going on, how could she be sure that her daughter might not be caught in some one of her own traps? Once caught, it might be impossible to extricate her.

And, since Nancy was still fancy free, it seemed that this course was wise. Every year she was older than the one before, and perhaps by and by she would have some appreciation of the importance of marriage. She could then possibly be induced to select for a husband a man to be relied on to give her a position in the world rather than one whose only recommendation was that he was an excellent dancer or tennis player.

All this is full of wisdom and might have been carried out had not a certain young man who was as much of a scapegrace as Nancy herself heard the matter talked about—how a certain girl he had never seen or heard of had been buried in the country to keep her away from men because she had a mania for breaking hearts for pastime. The young man who heard the gossip, unterrified by the broken hearts of others, straightway was seized with a desire to have his own heart broken.

He asked the young lady's name and where she had been buried. The former he had no difficulty in learning; the latter required diligent investigation.

One morning when the July sun was shining down on a waving wheatfield Nancy Burrows heard the sound of a distant mowing machine. Going to a window, she saw a pair of horses drawing the machine in question along the edge of a field of wheat. The driver was dressed in a woolen shirt, trousers and a hood brimmed, faded straw hat. Doubtless, the harvest having arrived, a farm hand had been hired to cut the grain.

Nancy put on a shade hat and strolled out to witness the operation of cutting wheat. As she drew near the machine she noticed that the man driving it was not old. Indeed, he was not middle aged; he was young. But his dress was execrable. He didn't wear a cravat, not even a collar. Nevertheless his figure showed to advantage in his farmer's costume. As Nancy approached nearer she saw that he was not bad looking.

Nancy stood where the machine would pass her and as it did so expected the driver would give her an admiring glance such as she had been used to receiving from men, but at the moment he seemed to be interested in something about the harness of one of the horses and didn't even look at her. When he came back Nancy called to him, motioning him to stop. He pulled in and waited to hear what she had to say to him.

"Would you mind explaining your machine to me?" she asked.

"Can't; I'm working by the hour. Git up!" was the response, and the machine rattled on its way.

"Well, I declare!" muttered Miss Burrows. "How little sense of politeness these country jakes have!"

When the farm hand returned he found the lady standing directly in his way, and he was forced to pull up or run over her.

"Would you mind moving aside, miss?" he asked. "You're directly in the way."

"Yes, I would. I asked you to explain your machine to me, and you refused. I have not been used to being treated that way."

Having been brought to terms, the young man did not seem averse to a bit of dialogue.

"Are you working for the man who owns this farm?" asked Nancy.

"I am."

"Are you going to stay at the house?"

"No."

"How long do you expect to work here?"

"As long as I'm wanted—till the end of the season, I reckon."

The man made several attempts to start his team, but every time was stopped with a question which Miss Burrows conjured up for the occasion. At last she permitted him to go on, with the injunction that thereafter when a lady asked him for information he was to stop his team and listen deferentially.

Mrs. Burrows one morning, sitting at a window reading a novel, saw her daughter emerge from the house, look about her irresolutely, pluck a spear of grass and chew on it, then proceed down into the wheatfield where the farm hand was driving the mowing machine. On Nancy's arrival the machine stopped, and a brief dialogue took place between the man and the girl. The man descended from his seat and helped the girl up into it. Then he drove from the ground, walking beside the machine for some distance, when Nancy held out her hands for the reins. They were passed up to her, and with difficulty she maintained her seat and drove the team.

"Great heavens," exclaimed the mother, "the child will fall off and be cut to pieces!"

But Nancy managed to maintain her balance, and her mother, having held her breath till her daughter descended from her perch, breathed easier.

"If he were any one but a country bumpkin," said the mother doubtfully, "I should feel worried."

The country bumpkin remained about the farm for some time, though he did not appear to work very steadily. Nancy found him far more useful to amuse her than the scarecrow and visited him frequently while he was at work. But she usually did so when her mother was busy or taking a siesta, so that she wasn't observed.

One day the farmer said to his hand: "I didn't hire you to amuse city boarders. I reckon you can light out. Here's what's due you." The hand made no reply, but, taking his wages, departed. The next morning, seeing Nancy leave the house to go to the wheatfield, he sauntered toward the fence. She saw him and, approaching, asked him why he was not at work.

"I'm discharged," was the reply.

"Discharged! What for?"

"The farmer says I spend too much of my time with you."

"You don't mean it! That's too bad. I'm awfully sorry. I didn't mean to take you away from your work."

"Can't be helped now. Besides, if he'd take me back I'd do it all over again."

"It's very nice of you to say that," said Nancy, lowering her eyes. "I'm indebted to you for a great deal of pleasure. It's very lonely here. I'm awfully sorry you won't be here any more. Where are you going?"

"I don't think I'll go right away. I'll stay where I am for awhile to see if I can't get more work about here."

"I'm glad you're not going right away."

About the time Mrs. Burrows was thinking of taking her daughter back to the city Miss Nancy was missing one evening from the supper table. The mother went to her daughter's room, but did not find her. Seven, 8, 9 o'clock came and no Nancy. Mrs. Burrows went over to some scattered houses across the road to make inquiries. She was informed that about 5 o'clock in the afternoon the discharged farm hand, driving on the road in a resplendent motor, picked up Nancy and disappeared in a cloud of dust.

Mrs. Burrows was very mad.

Nancy didn't show up again at the farm, but in a few days her mother received a letter from her stating that she had been married after a courtship that was "just too romantic for anything." A young man she had never seen, but had long loved her, so he said, had gone to the country disguised as a farm hand to win her. But mamma needn't worry, because he belonged to one of the best and wealthiest families in the city, was a member of the principal clubs and one of the best bridge whist players in the country.

"Can it possibly be that a man in a faded straw hat and without a collar can be a gentleman?" said the mother to herself.

The object for which she had taken her daughter to the country having ended, to say the least, peculiarly, Mrs. Burrows took the next train to the city. Before even announcing her presence there to her daughter she made inquiries about the man who had run away with her child and learned that Nancy had spoken the truth, but not all of it, for the groom had drawn the financial part of it very mildly. He was heir expectant to several millions.

Mrs. Burrows on getting this information sent for the couple and forgave them.

It has been said that the next summer no fewer than a dozen ladies, who had heard of this episode, took their daughters to spend the season on farms. But it does not appear that any of them married a rich man, while two of them married countrymen.

"SHOOTING THE SUN."

Simplest Way of Locating a Ship's Position at Sea.

Out of sight of land a ship's geographical position is determined either by keeping a careful record of the course steered and the distance run, known as dead reckoning, or by the combined use of chronometer and sextant—that is, by observation of the heavenly bodies. The operation of finding the latitude and longitude of observation can be performed in a number of ways, of which the simplest and most convenient is by measuring the altitude of the sun above the horizon at noon, as is indicated on the vernier of the sextant and spoken of at sea as "shooting the sun." An arithmetical computation by the aid of logarithms is thus quickly made which shows exactly how far the ship is north or south of the equator, or, in other words, the latitude.

Finding the longitude, however, is a somewhat longer process. An observation is made either in the forenoon or afternoon, the chronometer time of the horizon contact of the sun's image being noted. A calculation is then made which gives the exact time at the spot where the ship happens to be, and, as the chronometer carried aboard shows the exact time at Greenwich, the prime meridian of longitude, the difference between the two expresses in hours and minutes (easily convertible into degrees and miles) the distance east or west of Greenwich.

Having thus, roughly speaking, found the latitude and longitude, a dot placed on the chart at the exact point where the lines of latitude and longitude cross denotes the ship's position.—Travel Magazine.

FLOGGED THE FAT MEN.

Spartan Cure For Those Who Grew Too Stout For Military Duty.

Among the ancient Spartans everything was considered secondary to military efficiency, and with a view to securing this the boys and men were by law kept in a continual state of "training." No deformed child was allowed to live. Boys were taken from their homes and subjected to military regulations at the age of seven. They were compelled to wear the same single garment winter and summer. At twenty they joined the ranks and from that age till they reached sixty were required to dine at the public tables, where only a certain quantity was supplied for each man. The magistrates interfered in absurdly small matters. They regulated the degree of fatness to which it was lawful for any citizen to extend his body.

Those who dared to grow too fat or too soft for military service and exercise were sometimes soundly flogged. Aelian in his history relates that Nauelis, son of Polytus, was brought before the ephors (magistrates) and the whole assembly of Sparta, and "his unlawful fatness" was publicly exposed and he was threatened with perpetual banishment if he did not bring his body within the regular Spartan compass and give up the culpable mode of living, which was declared to be more worthy of an Ionian than a Spartan.

A Literary Coterie.

Gubbins, who calls his living room the library, but is otherwise a good sort enough, brought home a near-sighted friend to dinner the other night. A young lady was standing near the door to welcome the guest.

"Allow me," said Gubbins, "to present you to my daughter."

The guest bowed, but the courteous inclination was directed not toward Miss Gubbins, but toward another of the household treasures, a plaster pillar surmounted by a bust.

"No, no," hastily interposed Gubbins, "to the right, not to the left; the one on the left is Homer."—New York Post.

Very Little Difference.

"Men have an advantage that woman never can possess," she complained. "Whenever a man wishes to hide his identity he can, by letting his whiskers grow or by shaving them off as the case may be, change his expression completely."

"That isn't so much of an advantage," he replied. "A woman can by putting on her complexion or leaving it off as the case may be, make just as much of a change in her appearance as a man is able to make in his with or without the aid of his whiskers."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Glaciers.

It has been demonstrated that the glacier does not move in one block, but flows, accommodating itself to the channel in which it moves. Professor Tyndall planted a row of sticks in a straight line across a glacier, and after a few days the line had become a crescent, showing that the middle of the glacier moved faster than the sides, just as in a river the stream is stronger in the center.

Ma Knew.

It was nearly midnight. "That fellow who is calling on Maude hates to go," growled Maude's papa.

"Why, it seems to me the young man is pretty far gone already," replied Maude's mamma, complacently.—Philadelphia Record.

Too True.

A critic once wrote of Whistler's portrait of Carlyle that it was not life size.

"No," was the artist's comment; "few men are."

Never Did.

"While you were standing in the doorway telling the sweet young thing goodnight did it ever dawn upon you"—

"Oh, no! I never stayed that late."—Judge.

Miss Rebecca N. Rhoads is confined to her home on West Linn Street with a siege of mumps.

Governor John K. Tener will deliver the address to the graduating class at Penn State College.

The annual reception of the High School alumni to the graduating class will be held June 5th.

Miss Marie Walsh returned home on Saturday, last, after an extended visit with friends in New York State.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Harrison Walker are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter on Thursday morning of last week.

"The Republican" recently received a welcome letter from Rush Yarnell, a Centre County boy who is making good in Detroit.

Robert McMullen, passenger brakeman on the Central Railroad of Penna., last week caught several nice trout, one measuring 17 ½ inches.

Paul Musser, the Millheim pitcher who had been the property of the Washington baseball club for a number of years, has been sold to the Los Angeles club of the Coast league.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Leathers and daughter, of Howard, will this week move to Bellefonte and occupy the property formerly occupied by Dr. R. G. H. Hayes on the Milesburg pike, below town.

Lawyer A. A. Dale, of Bellefonte, an aspirant for the Republican nomination for State Senator in the Centre-Clearfield district, is spending several days this week in Clearfield County.

Contractors Genret & Lambert are this week remodeling the High Street entrance to the Potter-Hoy Hardware Co. The display windows are being lowered to about the street level and also made about three feet deeper.

Rev. John Hewitt, who recently resigned his pastorate of St. John's Protestant Episcopal church, at Bellefonte, will depart tomorrow for Sunbury, where he will be located during the next two months.

Curtin Askey, of Pine Glenn, well known as a lumberman, was a visitor in town this week. He has been cutting railroad ties in Cambria County, taking out about 3,000 during the winter and having about as many more to get ready in order to finish the job.

Mrs. J. McClellan Davis, of Tyrone, visited several days last week with her son, W. Henry Davis, in Bellefonte, being enroute to Jersey Shore to spend a short time with another son, James. From the latter place she will go to New York State to visit with friends.

H. A. Garner, of nearby Bellefonte, one of Centre County's progressive farmers, was a business visitor in town on Wednesday of last week. Like most farmers Mr. Garner is lamenting the fact that weather conditions have interfered greatly with putting out the oats. He looks for a big wheat crop.

Madaline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Carpeneto, died last Thursday morning from heart trouble, after an illness of several months. Interment was made Saturday morning. She was aged 11 years and was a bright, affectionate child. The sympathy of the community is with the bereaved parents.

Philip F. Garbrick returned home from Kane on Monday, accompanied by Mrs. Garbrick. Phil has recovered nicely since his recent operation for appendicitis and while naturally still somewhat weak is able to be up and about. It will likely be several weeks before he is able to return to his work in the glass factory at Kane.

Representative C. L. Gramley, of Rebersburg, greeted friends in town last Saturday. Mr. Gramley is a candidate for renomination for the assembly on the Republican ticket. His friends contend in his behalf that he is entitled to a second term at Harrisburg and are urging that he receive a flattering vote at the primaries on the 19th.

Castle No. 357 Knights of the Golden Eagle, will worship with the congregation of the Methodist Episcopal church next Sunday morning. In the evening the Silver Jubilee of the Epworth League will be observed. Castle members will meet at the Castle Hall at 10:30 o'clock sharp. Caps, badges and buff gloves will be generally worn, but those not having these are urged to attend notwithstanding.

K. C. Raup, of Williamsport, was a visitor in town yesterday

Dr. H. W. Tate was a visitor in Williamsport over Sunday and Monday.

Architect Robert Cole was a business visitor to Lock Haven last Friday.

Dr. J. M. Brockerhoff was an arrival home from Atlantic City on Monday.

Miss Catherine Curtin is entertaining Miss Elizabeth Ardell, of Brooklyn.

Allen S. Garman, of Tyrone, greeted old home friends here last Saturday.

Miss Emma Aiken went to Altoona on Tuesday to visit with Mrs. Roy Brandon.

Arista Lucas, of near Unionville, was a visitor in town between trains yesterday.

Scott Harris, of Pittsburgh, is visiting here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Harris.

Miss Laura Runkle, of Centre Hall, was a week-end guest of Miss Louise Brachbill.

Mrs. A. O. Furst and Mrs. James C. Furst visited a day or two this week in Williamsport.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cohen are entertaining Mr. Cohen's niece, Mrs. David Saxe, of Mt. Union.

Misses Alice and Sarah Barnhart departed last Saturday for Columbus, Ohio, where they are visiting with their sister, Mrs. Arthur Harper.

Mrs. E. P. Irvin visited several days this week in Tyrone as the guest of Mrs. Connery, nee Miss Louise Armor.

Miss Agnes Gherrity departed yesterday for Jersey Shore, where she is visiting with her sister, Mrs. James Davis.

Miss Janet Scott, who enjoyed an extended visit in Texas, was an arrival home during the latter part of last week.

Miss Rebecca Valentine returned home on Friday of last week after a two weeks visit with friends in Philipsburg and DuBois.

Mrs. R. G. H. Hayes was hostess last Friday evening at the last of the spring meetings of Bellefonte Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Harry B. Scott, of Philipsburg, is this week motoring through the county looking after his fences as a candidate for Republican nomination for the Assembly. He is accompanied by Samuel Wigton and Jack Hollenback.

Dr. S. J. Miller, of Madera, Candidate for State Senator on the Republican Ticket at the Primaries on Tuesday, comes before the people with no political past to face, no political alliances to explain or political mistakes to live down.—Adv.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the State-Centre Electric Company held in Bellefonte last Saturday the proposed removal of the central plant from Bellefonte to Milesburg was formally approved. The building at present used as a power plant will likely be rented to a wholesale concern.

The many friends of Dr. Lee B. Woodcock, formerly of Bellefonte, now of Scranton, will be delighted to know that he is to give a recital at Highland Hall, in Hollidaysburg, next Friday evening, May 15. He brings with him his most talented pupil, Mr. Schneller, a man of remarkable promise.

Oliver Braden, general manager of the Cherry Chemical Co., of Philadelphia, was in town last week looking after his extensive trade in boiler compounds and lubricating oils in this section. Mr. Braden has been visiting Bellefonte at stated periods for many years and is known to virtually every user of machinery from one end of the State to another.

Mrs. Isaac Thomas and family hereby publicly extend their appreciation of the many kindnesses to them during their sad bereavement, and in the help extended by the friends and neighbors, as well as extending their appreciation to the Rev. Dr. G. E. Hawes, the Rev. Dr. E. H. Yocum and the Rev. Dr. James P. Hughes; also to the G. A. R. Veterans, Post 95, of which Isaac Thomas, deceased, was a member.

Harry Fisher, a sailor attached at present to the U. S. S. North Carolina, a son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Fisher, of this place, arrived home on Wednesday morning on a ten days furlough. He had not sent word that he would be home and naturally gave his parents quite a delightful surprise. After enjoying his brief vacation at home he will go to Boston and will leave that city June 10th on the U. S. S. McDougal for Vera Cruz.

Vincent Taylor departed on Tuesday for Washington, carrying with him a principal's appointment to West Point, received on Saturday last. The appointment was made on the recommendation of Congressman Charles E. Patton. Some time ago Vincent held an alternate's appointment to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis and easily passed the examination. It so happened that the principal also passed, so Vincent could not enter. He was made happy, however, on receipt of formal notice of his appointment to West Point and on Tuesday he departed to take the examinations, if such are found to be necessary. It may be that he will be admitted on his High School certificate and the additional fact of his having recently passed the examination for Annapolis. If necessary he will take the examinations, being quite confident of his ability to go through with flying colors. His home friends will watch his course with the greatest of interest.

Mrs. Buttz, of State College, visited yesterday and today with Mrs. J. A. Aiken.

Mrs. Rachel Harris leaves today for Philadelphia, where she will visit with her son Joseph.

Mrs. James Harris and Mrs. Brown and maid will leave the last of the week for Atlantic City.

John Viehdorfer, of Snow Shoe, visited over the week-end at the William Crawford home, at Coleville.

Charles A. McClure, of Philadelphia, spent Sunday here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James I. McClure.

Mrs. George L. Potter and Miss Marguerite Potter are in Atlantic City, having gone to the shore on Monday.

Mrs. Charles R. Kurtz, after a very delightful visit with Bellefonte friends, returned on Monday to her home in Overbrook.

Mrs. Robert Fay and Mrs. Beckman, of Altoona, visited over Wednesday night with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John N. Lane, on Allegheny Street.

J. H. Holmes, 3d, P. P. Henshall, M J. Emerick, M. B. Meyers, W. S. Slagle, W. P. Reynolds, Lynn Dougherty, and Russell S. Stout comprised a group from State College who motored to Lock Haven on a pleasure trip last Sunday.

The people who know Dr. S. J. Miller, of Madera, are very emphatic in their statements that he is worthy of every mans confidence and respect; that he has been a lifelong worker in the ranks of the Republican Party, has never held office, and is especially qualified to represent the 34th District in the State Senate.—Adv.

A good baseball game is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the new Hughes athletic field on East Bishop Street. The opposing teams will be the Academy and the Indiana State Normal. They are well matched and usually play a close, interesting game. It is to be hoped that a large crowd will be on hand. Admission 25c. The two teams will play a second game at Indiana on May 21st.

G. E. Hawes, D. D., pastor of the Presbyterian Church, will speak on Sunday evening on the coming primaries. His subject is, "A Message to the Voter." Every man in Bellefonte should hear this sermon It is non-partisan, and free from personalities. Voters, go! Dr. Hawes also, is beginning a series of sermons for the mornings. The general topic is "Morning Scenes in the Old Testament." The dates and subjects are. May 17, "A Smoking Plain;" 24, "The Meeting at the River;" 31, "A Doomed City;" June 7, "The Story a Boy Told;" 14, "A King's Early Visit." These morning sermons should be of great intest; and doubtless will be.

The Lauderbach-Barber Co., wholesale grocers, this week installed an electric elevator in their warehouse nearby the Pennsylvania Railroad passenger station. Since the Bellefonte Shirt Factory removed its plant to its own building, nearby the big spring, the Lauderbach-Barber Co. have taken the entire Gamble building. Manager J. H. North has been thoroughly overhauling and systematizing the handling of goods, and the additional space just secured will enable him to put into force a complete and well simplified plan for prompt delivery of groceries, etc. to patrons. A separate room will be devoted to candies, another to paper bags, still another to cigars, etc., everything carried in stock having its particular place. Keeping track of goods on hand is a big problem in a wholesale plant, but with the system installed by Manager North troubles of this character are reduced to a minimum.

Sunday School Convention.

The forty-fifth annual convention of the Centre County Sunday School Association will be held in the Presbyterian church, at Bellefonte, on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 26th and 27th, next.

We will be fortunate in having with us throughout the convention, Mr. W. G. Landes, State Secretary, and of the most successful Sunday School workers in the country. Miss Martha Robison, State Sup't of Rural Work will also be with us.

We hope all Pastors and Superintendents will be present and that each school in the county will send a duly accredited delegate, who should be a teacher or officer. These will be entertained free by the people of Bellefonte, provided they send their names to Mr. H. C. Yeager five days before the convention if after sending in your name, you find that you cannot go, please notify Mr. Yeager to that effect. THIS IS IMPORTANT. In addition to the above we hope the schools will send a large number of representatives for all or part of the time. We will have a number of excellent speakers, and it would be well if all the teachers and officers of the county could hear them. They would gain fresh inspiration for their work.

L. W. NUTTALL, Secretary. C. L. GRAMLEY, President.

Taken to Danville.

Mrs. Ellen Murray, a resident of Bellefonte, was last Friday removed to the hospital at Danville. She became ill earlier in the week and on Friday morning her condition was inquired into by a commission appointed by the court. On the recommendation of the commission she was taken to Danville later in the day by Sheriff Lee. The commission reported that her husband is residing at Homestead.

CAUTION

LOOK BEFORE YOU ACT.

Don't pay out your hard cash until you have consulted with the leading Farmers' Supply Store, because we eat at very little expense—we eat at our own table and sleep in our own bed, and can give you the benefit of the saving in traveling expenses. Of course, we cannot give goods away, and we must have a small margin in keeping with the quality of the goods.

We handle everything of the very best make, from Plows and Harrows, Grain Drills, Corn Planters, Cultivators and all of the leading tilling implements. We have the Brookville Wagons as a specialty, also Buggies on orders. Just incidentally we might mention Cutting Boxes and Corn Shellers, Plant and Garden tools. Are you interested in seeds? We have Red Clover, Mammoth Clover, Alsike Clover and Alfalfa Seed, also Field Peas, Millet and Timothy Seed. These seeds are all of the very best obtainable. Then we have Chick Grit and Charcoal. Flax Seed Meal, Metal Hog Troughs, Galvanized Water Troughs, Sprayers and Spray Materials and Seed Potatoes. Perhaps you are in need of Fertilizers. If so, just come in and get exactly what you need and want. We have a warehouse just for fertilizers alone, and it is for your accommodation. We have both phones. Telephone your wants and you'll find us on the job. Thanking you for past patronage and soliciting a fair share in the future, I remain.

Truly yours,

John G. Dubbs,
